Laurie Mcfarland Jackson posted:

Elizabeth seemed to be a force of nature all her own. I travelled with her in Scotland in 2003 and 2006. She was fearless as she drove to sites to research our ancestry. She rode in speedboats to the Macfarlane islands in the middle of Loch Lomand. On the last trip to the islands she opened her blouse flasher-style to display her DNA tshirt underneath as she explained the program. Her passion for making genetic and family tree connections was infectious. I will miss her.
