What I'd give if I could say hello Dad, to hear your voice, to see you smile, to sit and chat a while. For those whom have a Dad - cherish him with care. For you'll never know the heartaches til you see his favorite chair. It broke my heart to lose you Dad but you didn't go alone. For part of me went with you the day God called you home. He saw you getting weary and he did what he thought best, he put his arms around you and whispered "come and rest". And with advice left unspoken you gently slipped away. I think of you in silence no eye will see me weep but many a silent tear will fall while others are asleep. No one will see me crying as the tears roll down my cheeks. It broke my heart to lose you Dad but you didn't go alone but part of me went with you the day God called you home. He saw you getting weary and he did what he thought best so he put his arms around you and whispered "come and rest". Rest In Peace, Dad. We love you. The girls,
